

Selma Masri

The Center for Epigenetics and Metabolism welcomes Dr. Selma Masri, a newly appointed Assistant Professor in the Department of Biological Chemistry in the School of Medicine, UCI.

The focus of Dr. Masri's research is on the metabolic relationships between the circadian clock and cancer. To develop this research she received a transition career development K22 award from the National Cancer Institute.